LOOKING FOR A JOB ON-CAMPUS?

Are you looking for the opportunity to be considered for a position that will instantly fortify your resume and enrich your experience at COC? Are you currently enrolled in 6 units and possess at least a 2.0 GPA? Would you like hiring supervisors to view your interest in working as a student employee on campus?

The Student Employee eligibility pool may be your answer. The pool provides all qualified students seeking part-time employment on campus with an opportunity to be considered for the privilege of working as a College Assistant at COC. By filling out the application, successful candidates will be placed in a qualified pool. By matching your availability and qualifications to their own departmental needs, only hiring managers have access to view the content of the pool and the ultimate hiring decision.

Students visiting our office seeking on-campus jobs will be:

- Given an application seeking basic information and hours of availability.
- Oriented about the general academic and job requirements, duties and responsibilities of an on campus student position.
- Screened/interviewed for placement into the eligibility pool. While this does not guarantee employment on campus, it gives you an opportunity to be considered for employment.

“Ghostwriter, the pattern is full”. I always thought this quote from Top Gun (1986) was just a clever way of saying “no” to someone. When I was looking at the “Best Careers of 2008” (US News), I was pleased to see that ghostwriting was on the list. Along with 30 additional coveted careers for the year, Biomedical Equipment Technician and Curriculum/Training Specialist also caught my eye.

Based on job satisfaction, training difficulty, inherent prestige, job market outlook (Bureau of Labor Statistics) and pay, the people at US News and World Report constructed the list to impart interesting information to the population of job seekers. This year’s list is unique for the reason that it has four new skilled-trade careers – an occurrence that had yet to be seen since most of the jobs on the list usually require at least a bachelor’s degree.

For those interested in the three careers I have mentioned, here is a brief description of their occupational information:

♦ Ghostwriter: writing articles, biographies, speeches, histories, etc. for authors, business leaders, politicians or just an interested Average Joe.
  Qualifications: Strong writing and interpersonal skills.
  Average salary: $61,000 per year.

♦ Biomedical Equipment Technician: Fix and manage performance of important medical equipment in hospitals and medical offices. Resistant to off-shoring (jobs that are sent to be filled over seas).
  Qualification: Two year degree in applied science.
  Average salary: $53,300.

♦ Curriculum/Training Specialist: Help schools pick textbooks and educational programs while motivating and informing teachers on the details. Occupation reported to grow faster than average through 2014 (Bureau of Labor Statistics).
  Qualifications: Bachelor’s degree or teaching credential.
  Average salary: $63,000.

GET TO KNOW YOURSELF
By Loida Sanchez (Career Advisor)

Here at the Career Center we believe that it is important for individuals to learn about their skills, interests, values, and personality in order to make the right career decision. We understand that choosing a career is very difficult and that is why we provide assessments such as the Myers-Briggs Type Indicator, Strong Interest Inventory, and Discover. These assessments are important to help you better understand yourself. What are your strengths and limitations? What type of environment do you prefer working in? Do you like working by yourself or with people? What are you good at? Could your hobby be your life long career? These are only a few of the many questions that can be answered by taking career assessments.

I used to think that just because I always liked painting that I would become a painter. I remember deciding to take a bunch of art classes in college. However, it was not long after I started my first semester that I learned that painting was not a career I wanted to pursue and ended up dropping out of college. I was lost and confused. It was not until I met with a Career Advisor and started taking career assessments that I really started learning about myself and about the world of work. I wish I would have visited the Career Center before spending a whole semester preparing for the wrong career. Taking the career assessments truly gave me a direction as to what type of careers I would be happiest in and guided me to where I am today.

CAREER EXPLORATION
by Carmen Viveros (Career Advisor)

The Career Development Process consists of various steps. The first step is to assess, using tools such as Strong Interest Inventory, Myers-Briggs Type Indicator (MBTI), and Discover. You will identify your skills, abilities, motivations, interests, values, temperaments, experience and accomplishments. You need this strong foundation of information about yourself before continuing with the other stages in the career development process.

The second step is to research and gather career and job information. You need to determine your goals and gather information about alternative jobs and careers. You can do this through reading information on websites, career exploration books, and by talking to well informed people that have experience or are currently in your field of interest. During your search make sure to seek information on high growth industries, labor market information, and general job and career information. Some useful websites are: www.careervoyages.gov, www.labormarketinfo.edd.ca.gov, http://online.onetcenter.org, and www.bls.gov/home.htm.

A tremendous amount of information can also be obtained through personal contacts that you make in internship and mentoring programs, job shadowing opportunities, networking, volunteering, and attending workshops. You may also seek career counseling or coaching if you need additional support.

Once you have conducted your research and made a decision on your career of interest and job objective you are now ready to develop your job search skills including writing resumes and performing interviews.

Finally, the last step is to take action. Make a plan and carry out your actions that move you toward your desired goal. Remember to seek support along the way and to keep a positive attitude.
FROM THE DIRECTOR’S CHAIR

Welcome to the College of the Canyons Career Corner newsletter. This semester we have gone with a new format. In past editions, I have written articles and included information I feel was important for students as they navigate the world of careers. With this edition, several staff have submitted articles they feel will be helpful and informative, and that in some cases provide insight to their personal experiences as a student. I hope you will enjoy the variety of topics, and please be sure to mark your calendars with our workshop dates, job & career fair and our first ever “Resume Rally”. Remember that these events are all free to you and members of the public, so spread the word!

Placement Success Story

Name: W. Garrett Myler

Job Title: Executive Assistant

Company: Investment Real Estate Associates

Duties: Assisting the Vice President, including Marketing.

(1) What advice would you give to other job seekers?
Don’t be complacent. Seek out great opportunities that will build your resume and provide valuable work experience that is applicable to your career path. Sell yourself and be enthusiastic. An employer can fix inexperience through training, but they can’t train enthusiasm. Look for a position you are not completely qualified for, otherwise you won’t grow and make progress. “Internship” is the golden word that gets you in without experience. Of course, use college resources such as CWEE and the Career Center to find the right position, customize your resume, and nail the interview.

(2) What kept you from becoming discouraged during your job search?
The support, confidence, and encouragement I received from the wonderful staff at the Career Center and CWEE.

(3) How did you feel when you received the job offer?
Empowered and successful. I’m on my way!

(4) Other comments:
Don’t sacrifice or wait to get a great career-oriented job in the name of getting your degree as quickly as possible. You will most likely fail to secure that entry level position unless you have built a resume with applicable work experience.
