| EMS-100          | Emergency Medical Foundations | This course will help prepare our students with the fundamental knowledge they need to be successful in the EMT program. The EMT program worked with IRPI to identify student populations that were unsuccessful in the EMT program and potential areas the students may need additional support in to gain that success. Historically Emergency Medical Responder (EMR) was used as a preparatory course for EMT and the data pulled from the IRPIE team suggested that EMR was not effective in improving student success. The team then disaggregated the data even further to find the potential academic gaps. The recommendation to us was to create a prep course on bio, chem etc. picking from fields that will fill academic gaps. | J. CrowleySB Tucker | TBD       |

-Motion to adopt the need for and conduct a full review of EMS-100; Motion by Garrett Rieck, second Linda Beauregard-Vasquez. All in favor: Unanimous.

| NC.NURS-050      | Nursing Assistant | This noncredit course sequence will provide students with foundational knowledge and skills in health care professions, including basic patient care, communication, professionalism, and medical terminology. It replaces the previously credit-based Nursing Assistant course, which has been discontinued due to loss of clinical sites and increasing regulatory restrictions by the California Department of Public Health (CDPH). By offering this new noncredit version without a clinical component, we can continue preparing students for entry-level health careers and future nursing pathways in a more accessible, no-cost format. The course will serve as a vital pipeline into the RN programs at College of the Canyons, with students earning a certificate that provides them additional points toward admission into the nursing program. | T. Waller | TBD       |
